Richard H. Beatty : Richard Beatty's Job Search Networking before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Richard Beatty's Job Search Networking:

I constantly recommend it to any job seeker I encounter. I've personally bought (and loaned out) three or four copies. Almost all jobs--and particularly jobs during a down economy--are obtained through networking. But "networking" seems very amorphous. Richard Beatty breaks it down into small tasks and sets you out a program. He guides you through creating a 2 minute speech, perfecting it, finding contacts, and conducting LOTS of informational interviews. When you are job searching, this structured program is priceless. It was geared particularly to people laid off in like the 1980s, I think, but the advice is timeless.
