How to Ace the Interview Get the Job:

0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. cut me a break By Lydia in Warminster I think Gloria Van Devender-Graves needs a shrink, this book is horrible, it was written by a vicious weasel that embellishes to a point of being pure garbage. 2 of 2 people found the following review helpful. ....disappointing By S. Muse This book was not at all what I expected from 2 supposedly knowledgeable professionals in the field. I learned 2 things that I did not already know out of the entire book, I was disappointed that I wasted my money, not only that, there was a reference to people in the hip hop industry not knowing how to act and I was personally insulted and very surprised that a better analogy and example could not have been used. I would never recommend this book to anyone. 0 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Short and sweet. By J. Brinker The book is okay. Gets to the point and basically says this... "Doesn't matter who you are or what you know, if you're a good interviewer and they like you you'll get the job. Looks are more important than quality and knowledge." HR reps are the dumb gate keepers that feel they are god's in flesh on this earth but actually know nothing and you can't offend them in any way shape or form... Yeah, a good quick read.

Within the first two minutes of an interview, hiring agents know whether or not to treat a job candidate seriously. In The Savvy Job Seeker, two experienced human resource insiders give prospective candidates the scoop on how to make the cut. It's not just the questions - or the answers! It's everything from personal appearance to body language, from email to table manners, from how well candidates follow directions, to how well they handle themselves under fire. This behind-the-scenes, how-to guide lets job candidates in on the secrets that can get them the job or stop them in their tracks.

Dressing for success still applies. In Savvy Interviewing, a great new book by John Van Devender and Gloria Van Devender-Graves, published by Capitol Books, the authors say, It's a sad fact, but some of today's job applicants are social barbarians. Dress your best because we want to see what you look like at your best. Whatever we actually want you to wear when you come to work for us is a totally different story. (Marvin Walberg) About the Author John Van Devender and Gloria Van Devender-Graves have interviewed more than a 1,000 people for jobs ranging from business to manufacturing to computer programming. Together, they have more than thirty-three years of hiring experience. Gloria is currently an HR recruiter in Tennessee, and John is communications manager in the HR unit of a Connecticut firm.
