Jeremy Bradley : The Official Guide to Being a Winnipeg Cheapskate before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised The Official Guide to Being a Winnipeg Cheapskate:

Let's face it: Winnipeggers are cheap... and we're damn proud of our thriftiness. There is so much emphasis on living a Hollywood lifestyle that the appreciation of hard-earned money is easily forgotten. On the Canadian Prairies we value what we make and each of us comes up with ways to cut corners and save pennies. This book has creative and fun ways to save money and live like a true Winnipegger: -Do you know how to ask for a discount and get it? How about getting something free because a store screwed up? -Ways to negotiate cheap hotel stays and significant savings on vacations -Techniques for how to cheaply celebrate holidays Why brag about how much you paid for something when you could boast about how much you saved?

About the Author Jeremy Bradley is a Winnipeg-born syndicated newspaper columnist and radio host. His top 40 music show Top of The Charts earned Jeremy the distinction of outstanding talk media webcaster in 2010 and 2011 by Talkers magazine. In addition to his hosting duties, Jeremy is also an entertainment reporter for local morning radio shows in the U.S. In 2011, his company, SpeakFree Media Inc., branched into literary publishing with its first novel A Double Dose of Sociopath.
